To install it, it must be copied from/opt/vboxquestaddiks-version/others/to the direction of the security of security. This is usually/lib/security/in 32 -bit or/lib64/linux guests/in 64 -bit linux guests. Consult your guest documentation for the right of the right. For example, to use pam .vbox.so with a Ubuntu Linux operating system and the gnome desktop manager (GDM) to automatically login with the credentials passed by the host, configure the invited operating system as follows: Copy the Pam .Vbox.so the direct security of security. In this case, /LIB /Security. Edit the PAM Configuration File for GDM, found in /etc/pam.d/gdm. Add the Auth Request Line Pam .vbox.So at the top. In addition, in most Linux distributions, there is a file called /etc/pam.d/common-auth. This file is included in many other services, such as the GDM file mentioned above. You should also add the authentication line pam .vbox.so. If authentications against the shadow database using pam .unix.so or pam .unix2.so desired, the try first .pass argument for pam .unix.so or use .first .pass for pam .unix2.so necessary to pass the credentials of the virtual oraclebox for the authentication of the database database. For Ubuntu, this needs to be added to /etc/pam.d/common-auth, at the end of the line that references Pam .unix.so. This argument tells the PAM to use the credentials already present in the pile, such as those provided by the Oracle VM virtualbox PAM. Warning of an incorrectly configured PAM can effectively prevent you from logging in the guest system. To facilitate the implementation, you can pass the depletion of the argument soon after the instruction pam .vbox.so. The depth of the depth log will be recorded using the syslog. NOTE BY PARTY, PAM .VBOX expects credentials to arrive from the host. When a login prompt is shown, for example, by GDM/kdm or by the text console, and Pam .Vbox Pam .vbox .desu eb lliw eulav tluafed a ,ytreporp eht no gnidnepeD ,dna derongi si ytreporp eht JTSEUGYLNODRI tes galf tcerroc eht evah ton seod ytreporp tseug xobv .map a fl etoN ? can can result in pam .vbox not waiting for credentials. Consult the appropriate syslog file for more information and use the debug option. 2.1.2.1.Ä Oracle VM VirtualBox Greeter for Ubuntu/LightDM Oracle VM VirtualBox comes with a greeter module, named vbox-greeter, that can be used with LightDM. LightDM is the default display manager for Ubuntu Linux and therefore can also be used for automated guest logins. vbox-greeter does not need the pam .vbox module described in SectionÄ.2.1.2. ,eÄÄÄAutomated Linux and UNIX Guest LoginseÄÄÄin order to function. It comes with its own authentication mechanism provided by LightDM. However, to provide maximum flexibility both modules can be used together on the same guest. As with the pam .vbox module, vbox-greeter is shipped as part of the Guest Additions but it is not installed or activated on the guest OS by default. To install vbox-greeter automatically upon Guest Additions installation, use the --with-autologon option when starting the VBoxLinuxAdditions.run file: # ./VBoxLinuxAdditions.run -- --with-autologon For manual or postponed installation, copy the vbox-greeter.desktop file from /opt/VBoxGuestAdditions-/other/ to the xgreeters directory, which is usually /usr/share/xgreeters/. See your guest OS documentation for the name of the correct LightDM greeter directory. The vbox-greeter module is installed by the Oracle VM VirtualBox Guest Additions installer and is located in /usr/sbin/. To enable vbox-greeter as the standard greeter module, edit the file /etc/lightdm/lightdm.conf as follows: [SeatDefaults] greeter-session=vbox-greeterNote The LightDM server must be fully restarted in order for vbox-greeter to be used as the default greeter. As root on Ubuntu, run service lightdm --full-restart or restart the guest. vbox-greeter is independent of the graphical session you choose, such as Gnome, KDE, or Unity. However, vbox-greeter does require FLTK 1.3 or later to implement User interface itself. There are numerous guest properties that can be used to further customize the login experience. To automatically login to users, the same guest properties apply as PAM .VBOX. See section 2.1.2. "utomated Linux and UNIX Guest Logins". In addition to the guest properties mentioned earlier, VBox-Greeter allows you to further customize your user interface. The following guest properties are located in/virtualbox/hunderadd/greether/directory: hiderestart: set to 1 if the VBox-Greeter should hide the button to restart the quest. This property must be set read-only for the guest (rdonlyguest). HIDESHUTDOWN: Set as 1 if the VBox-Greeter should hide the button to turn off the guest. This property must be set read-only for the guest (rdonlyguest). BannerPath: Path to a .png file to use as a banner image at the top of the greeting. The image size should be 460 x 90 pixels, any bit depth. This property must be set read-only for the guest (rdonlyguest). Usetheming: Set as 1 to activate the following theme options. This property must be set read-only for the guest (rdonlyguest). Theme/BackgroundColor: hexadecimal rrggbb color for the background. This property must be set read-only for the guest (rdonlyguest). Theme/Logondialog/Headercolor: HEXADECIMAL RRGGBB Color in the foreground for the header text. This property must be set read-only for the guest (rdonlyguest). Theme/Logondialog/BackgroundColor: hexadecimal color rrggbb for the login dialog background. This property must be set read-only for the guest (rdonlyguest). Theme/Logondialog/ButtonColor: HEXADECIMAL RRGGBB Background color for login dialog. This property must beReading only for the Ho³Spede (rdonlygest). Observe the same restrictions for the properties of the upper tution apply to those specified in the pam .vbox section. section. property.
