Because it is not static. There were traditional stones that date back to the 15th century, but those were replaced in the 19th century, when National for jewelers in America has tried to standardize birthstones and new tombstones assigned every month. So, starting in 1912, there were at least two stones you could argue were born "right" for every month.å, to issues complicate further, there are zodiacal lucky stones so because because because The zodiac does not follow our traditional calendar and every sharing sign two months and also has its traditional stone. But these do not always correspond with both months. So the result of this is if you were born on June 22nd and I am a cancer, your zodiacal birth is emerald, your traditional Birthstone could be turquoise, and your modern Birthstone could be pearl. And this is only in America! In Great Britain, there are also different stones for each month. The corresponding births months and rights to the zodiac signs are much more complicated than it has the right to be. If you are going to ACE this quiz, you will really have to know your things.
