Goliard songslatin songs written from X to XIII century. They are among the first examples of western lay music. They were created by wandering scholars called Goliards. Goliard songs praise the beauty of nature and pleasures of love, drinking and student life. Many Satirize Church and society. The composer of the 20th century Carl Orff based his Carmina Burana (1937) on a collection of German goliard songs from the 13th century. Photo Courtesy: Frank Hoensch/Redferns/Getty Images 2019 was a record year. New artists such as King Princess, Billie Eilish and Lil Nas X hit the waves and dominated the cultural spirit. It's almost bizarre to remember how many other artists of the time such as Drake, Madonna and The Raconteurs released albums this year. We could have sworn Tool had a meeting. And Vampire Weekends are back together, too. But all we remember of the last few months is that we couldn't escape the Old Road and Lizzo is now in charge of everything. Before another year ends, let's take a look at the best music coming out from 2019. Channel Tres is rapidly becoming one of the most prolific names in dance music. After constantly releasing songs with syrupy vocals and hip-house rhythms for two years, "Sexy Black Timberlake" is Black Moses' first single, their latest EP. While fans wait for his debut album, early adopters can still take him on tour in smaller venues before he starts selling the stadiums. Trust us on this "Channel Tres" SoCal sensuality and Barry-White-on-Xanax voice will please many dance floors in 2020. Sorry, Lil Nas X, but the song of the summer wasn't your "Old Street". No summer jam gave us the reggaeton vibes of the '90s at an altitude of 30,000 feet, just like "Con Altura". We're in a post-"Despacito" world, and the Latin and Spanish music have finally found a much broader fan base. El Guincho has been making amazing dance music since 2007 at Alegranza, so it's even more exciting to see these three conquer the world after all this time. Photo Courtesy: Kevin Winter/Getty Images Just take a look at the videos of 1.1 billion views on YouTube to see how these three have been following their huge success. El Guincho, RosalÃâa and J Balvin have earned their way in a big rotation on all beach party playlists for years to come. It was only April, but FKA Twigs released the best ballad of the year with "Cellophane", the first single from their second album Magdalene. It's heavy on the melodrama, and you can feel its throat pain every crescendo, but it's a hint of wrapped in the song. Photo Courtesy: Dennis Manuel/AFROPUNK/Getty Images The song seems to be about her relationship with Robert Pattinson. Carrying the emotional weight of the relationship while while The extremely positive public approval of their love seems to have influenced what could have been. But we don't worry about Fka twigs - you'll find something else to store in Plastic Wrap pretty soon. Lizzo's had an explosive year, to say the least. Pop Star made a big splash in 2019 with the release of its debut album, I love you. Of all his releases to hit him big on the radio, no song takes the dance floor in motion like "Tempo", his collaboration with Missy Elliott. Photo courtesy: Lizzo / YouTube Give Lizzo the chance to spit out playful bars at her next conquest, but if they haven't been sold yet, she offers a flute groove at the end to seal the deal. And know that a real â" if an elevator released music and said it was "with Missy Elliott", both in that elevator all day. Genius Perfume a "¢ Mike Hadreas sings several songs about his relationship with his body. 2017 is not fit, she has splendidly examined her gender confusion and her challenges living with Crohn's disease. "Eye in the Wall", her collaboration with Seattle choreographer Kate Wallich, sees Hadreas giving away to her body's desire to move. Photo Courtesy: Kieran Frost / Redferns / Getty Images The nine-minute psychedelic run takes all of us with him to a cosmic dance floor eon away. It is a beautiful and triumphant opus that prepares you to explore your inner rhythms. Tyler, the creator has a very clear message to his enemies about "Which ones are good" â" ¬ ". His latest album Igor was a creative blend of Rap and R & B that claimed the free plan on the chart of the Top 200 albums of Billboard. "What's good" is his most aggressive and dizzying track that jumps quickly from humming beats to synthesized and fluid R & B. Photo courtesy: Andrew Chin/Getty Images As every verse gets more intense, relaxing synths is ~70s are used as distraction to refresh you before I hit you with another verse. After comparing him to God, a vampire and a crocodile with an eye for Steve Irwin, we were left speechless, which makes the piano piano overcoming everything more disturbing. The title track from Blake's fourth studio album is a delicate commitment to keep from giving to depression. In the past year, the musician has publicly acknowledged he sought treatment for having suicidal thoughts. Photo courtesy: Randy Holmes/ABC/Getty Images It was a powerful confession from the musician who wanted to use his story to help remove the stigma surrounding mental illness. "Assume form" is a beautiful moment of revolutionary string piano for Blake and a sweet reminder for all of us to live longer in the moment. "The Biggest" is like the last item you wrap in the car before you go sunset. It is also a cry to escape from the time when an entire generation was not completely burned. Or when Los Angeles were not literally on fire. Together with the manufacturer Jack Antonoff, Lana del Rey created the IL song for the existential crisis we all had at some point in 2019. Photo courtesy: Daniel Knighton/Getty Images He asks for simpler times, such as the 1970 Laurel Canyon in L.A. when he was frequented by bands like The Doors and The Mamas and The Papas. Hell, she would've been content to go back to the late 2000s rock resurrection in New York City. As the cover for his 2019 album Norman F----- Rockwell!, "The Greatest" comes for our hand so we can watch the end of the world together.
