Download > View SAP SD Scheduling Agreement as a free PDF With SAP S/4HANA Logistics' Sourcing and Procurement LoB, you can take advantage of the SAP Best Practices activation approach to customize programming agreements. However, if you use the traditional customization approach, this blog post can help. Defining Document Types Programming agreements are defined and managed as documents in the system. It is possible to group these documents under different types of business requirements-based documents. First, it is necessary to define types of documents and their attributes in customization. The tables below provide the standard SAP configuration; additional types of programming agreement documents may be defined depending on the business requirements, through IMG (SPRO) Materials management /2005 Purchases \geq Materials Programming Agreement Define Document Types. New numbers ranges can also be defined and used as needed. This step is usually necessary if new types of documents are defined in the previous step. The menu path to create numbers ranges is IMG (SPRO) \vee Materials management Purchases Programming Agreement \geq Define numbers ranges. Categories of allowed articles After defining the types of documents for the programming agreements, select the line for the Doc type and double-click on the allowed articles categories. In the categories of items admissible for the Document Type screen, keep the element category as indicated in the table below. These element categories can be configured depending on the business requirements. This configuration determines which categories of elements can be selected for a type of document given by the user when creating the programming agreement.
