" The autococchiaie on the interested range of mowers showing the problems described in the bulletin and are still in guarantee. If they're all ready, and yet you don't start, I think the autocock thing might be what's wrong, right? page 2 the problem of automatic choking is 1) becomes sticky and the butterfly that lies the connecting rod stops when it gets dirty. I can see if a factory warranty remains on your lawnmower; Just get the serial number on the back of the lawnmower deck: Please note that the warranty covers factory defects and if your non-start is due to the depreciated petrol, for example, repairs are generally not covered by warranty. when you take your lawnmower for service, make sure you communicate clearly with the service manager if/when you approve for any work to do in advance, in case the problem is not covered in warranty (for example, gas stationary fuel tank) here is the link to find a honda retailer in your area that can offer a service; just select the lawnmowers, check off service and enter your postcode for a list: find a dealer honda kate, the serial number is on a sticker on the back of the lawnmower bridge; seems this: honda has recently issued a service newsletter that could help; the problem is on some mowers, including the hrr2168vka, the automatic stroking (crucial to start the engine) could be tied, making it almost impossible to start. I have a serial number honda hrx2173hya maga 2055007 you know if it was part of the call of the automatic choking service. starts but it works very well. 3. ok, the lawnmower is in the interested range of units that can benefit from the improvement of the autochoke control group. Thank you for your help. find a dealer near you oando this link: find aHonda if you are not the original owner, Honda would still want to get your name and address in the system for this lawnmower, in the unlikely event there is ever a product safety call on the unit. Be sure ofOptions with your dealer and tell them not to do any work billable without your prior authorization. check your dealer's policy before taking the lawnmower and make sure you let them know you get your authorization before performing any repairs. Robert - thank you very much. Here's what to do: 1. Can you tell me what year is ocit? not for the weak of heart. best, dave ok, that lawnmower has never been registered by the first owner, so the start date of the watch of the warranty is when the lawnmower has been invoiced to the dealer of honda, 3/3/2012. That serial number also tells me that your lawnmower is in the affected range of mowers that may have an attacking autochoke. autocot.
