While there is no simple "a step" way to convert a PDF file to look exactly like Microsoft Word, you can do conversion by copying and pasting elements between the two programs. Open PDF document in Adobe Reader. Upload Microsoft Word. Click "Tools" on the main menu then "Select & Zoom". Choose the "Snapshot Tool". Place the mouse in the top corner of the page, click and drag the tool down on the whole page. When you release the button the program will make a copy of your page. Copy the text from the PDF file first if the document has both text and images. Choose the "Select the tool" in the "Tools" menu, then use the mouse to select the text. Copy and paste it into its separate Word file for now. Then go back and use the snapshot tool to copy and paste images. Use the "Format Picture" tool, "Size", "Text Wrapping," and "Format Autoshape" in Word to edit the image. Right-click the image to find these editing tools. Add a text box (or more) to the file that contains the image from PDF. Copy and paste text from other Word file (see point five) into the text box. Edit the text so that it looks like the PDF version. Repeat this action for each page in the PDF file. Open your PDF document in Adobe Acrobat as an alternative. Click "File" then "Save As" on the Acrobat main menu. Choose "Microsoft Word" from the "Type" drop-down list andsave the file. You will still have to make some formatting as described in the previous stages. Last Updated 18 December 2020 Technology has taken a leap of observation in providing solutions for man. The man.Now, the technology used to appear complex and would require a great deal of skills to manage the available solutions. Today, we have the technology applicable in simpler human activities such as smart products with smart algorithms that feed them as judgments without errors and provide intelligent and analytical solutions. Does technology have all the answers? This article by Credit Suisse tells us that technology does not have all the answers because it was found to expose "like biases," as human beings. No one can discredit the impact of technology, but it is not completely devoid of human input and this is why we experience these prejudices in many areas that we have technology that keeps foot. Creating technological solutions transparently This article suggests that the process of creating technological solutions is made transparent and subject to the contribution of many people who end up as users of the product - male, female, young, old, learned, untrained and all other preferences as we have them. It also emphasizes the importance of having women on product development teams. This approach is not sure to eliminate all forms of prejudice, but it is a good way to start to assess the full benefits of technology. Technology as a link tool Technology has so far been an important tool for connecting us humans. It is used and appreciated by everyone regardless of race, language and sex. To keep him less subjective to these human prejudices. I think we should gather opinions on products and solutions before making them available to the public. This could be done by collecting inputs from target users and receiving feedback through production stages. "The recognition of the problem is a start... success will depend on inclusive technologies that meet this vast unused market. "can not be more suitable especially at a time when we look for technology for solutions. Tell us why! I am a great fan of open source software because it is free and usually has the same functionality as a commercial application! One negative side to open the source software is lack of support, but that the problem is usually constituted by active forums and community threads initiated by greedy followers. There are tons of free software applications that you can download for office productivity, Internet, multimedia, design, Windows utility, etc, but if you are unfamiliar with open source software, you might not know which program is the best out of myriad of choices. This is the only other negative side on freeware: some of it contains junk items like bundled app or annoying toolbars. In this article, I'm about to mention a few websites that I visit very often when looking for safe and clean freeware applications to download. Gizmo's Freeware Reviews The site of Gizmo's Freeware Review must be the best web site to find great freeware applications. There are a lot of sites thathuge freeware programs lists with small panoramics of each program, but the gizmo site is insanely popular because they spend time writingand test each program they review to make sure it functions as expected. You can navigate directly into a category at the top of the page like Windows, Mac, Linux, iPhone/iPad, etc. Previously, they used only to cover Windows and Mac, but recently expanded to cover all the most popular operating systems. You can also scroll down and click the panels: Best Freeware Lists, Freeware Categories and Security Wizard. I would strongly suggest you go through the security wizard because it gives you a list of custom-made security software for your operating system, the level of computer experience and your exposure to risky online activities. The wizard will also tell you how to make sure your PC is not already infected and will give you suggestions for how to protect yourself in the future from malware, spyware and viruses. In addition to all this, the site has a blog with a huge number of articles on all kinds of useful technical topics. Many of the articles that link to their review pages and gives you a very thorough understanding of the theme. Ninite Ninite is another very popular service that I use a lot with my friends and family when setting up new computers or when I have to reformat and reinstall the operating system on a computer. Basically, it is a program that allows you to download multiple freeware applications at once and install them without having to click Next, Next, Next! Just select the applications you want to install and click the Get Installer button. Outside doing just is super easy to install freeware applications, it also has a couple of other major advantages. First, all the software is super safe and clean. Although an application has a toolbar included as Java, Ninite will prevent installing the toolbar. Also download the latest versions of programs directly fromofficial and check the hash values to ensure integrity. Secondly, you should keep the installer somewhere on your computer instead of eliminating itrun again will automatically check all freeware apps and download the latest versions if available. If you've already installed the latest version, it'll just skip that program. Then using the installer is like having a free program that will update all applications automatically too! What I like most is that it will install the 64-bit version of the software if I am running the installer on a 64-bit operating system. This program is simply impressive and will save you a lot of time. NirSoft If you've read a decent number of my previous posts, you'll know I just love people in NirSoft. It is basically a site with a lot of small utilities designed for very specific tasks. Do you want to copy video files that are stored in your browser cache? There's a utility for this. Want to check the volume of your computer from the mouse wheel? There's a utility for this. Want to see all passwords stored in your browser? There's a utility for this. You got the picture! There are over a hundred of these really useful utilities that work very well. Also, they do not contain any crapware bundled or anything. Portable Apps Do you have a right USB stick? So why not install PortableApps there! They are all freeware applications stored on a USB stick that you can use anywhere on any machine. They have up to 300 legal versions of applications that have been reversed to perform portably on a USB stick. Applications are often updated and there are no ads, no spyware, no adware, no time limit, etc. It is simply free and can be very useful if you happen to travel a lot. What is really impressive is that you can throw the whole thing into a Dropbox folder and run everything directly from there! You don't even have to worry about bringing a flash drive with you. FileHippo FileHippo has been around for a long timeand it is still one of the best sites to find good freeware programs. What I eventually use FileHippo more for anything else is isprevious versions of programs. It is not often, but there are times when you do not want the latest version of a program. Maybe because it can't run on an old system or because it has a bug that is causing problems on the system, so the only option is to download a previous version. The only problem I've seen with the site lately is that some programs, but not all, now come with a FileHippo owner downloader rather than the direct download of the program. This bundling tries to install adware on your system, so be careful to uncheck when installing the program. I could find this only with a couple of programs, so the vast majority still connect directly to the program files, but because of this new behavior and too many ads on the site, I can not recommend it the site overwhelmingly. Mentionable sites Outside of these, there are a couple of other sites I visit, but they tend to contain shorter overviews without real reviews or other. You will still not find spyware or malware on these sites. MajorGeeks - It seems that it was designed in the 1990s and probably has been around since, but a great site for a lot of technological tools. Many and a lot of technological utilities that are difficult to find elsewhere. SnapFiles - A good clean site with minimal ads and clear cutting categories for freeware, shareware, etc. I normally address the user ratings and comments to determine the dignity of the freeware app. FileForum BetaNews - You can normally find the latest freeware apps here before you reach other download sites. I don't know how they do it, but you'll find the latest software here. Sites to Avoid You Could Ask Why I Did Not mention Freeware Sites like SourceForge and CNET? Well, that's because I don't recommend those sites anymore. They went the way of making money and do not connect toreal officers, but instead they let you download their own owner installer. CNET is the worst because it doesgo through several screens trying to get to install junkware before you can install the real application you want to download, for me, it is easy to avoid all the garbage, but a lot of people will end up with adware on their computer and have no idea why. Unfortunately, sites such as Download.com, which is the same as cnet, show up in search results, which makes them more difficult to avoid. Most of all on cnet you will be able to find on one of the sites I mentioned above. Enjoy!
