Used Car Buying Tips

1

Check the body of the vehicle.

Check out the vehicle interior.

6

Inspect the paint from different angles for dents, scratches and cracks in the paint. If flaking in the paint is present that is a warning signal. Cracked paint and deep scratches can lead to future rust. Scratches on the undercarriage could indicate off-road abuse or accident damage. Look for uneven body work or ripples in the paint, if those are present this is an indicator that there has been prior damage and poor workmanship in the repair.

Make sure that there are no tears in the fabric or foul smells inside the vehicle. Typically if the inside of the vehicle is well maintained than so are all the mechanical aspects. Bring out the kid in you and flip every switch, push every button and scan every inch of the interior. Make sure every switch does something and is working - nothing is too mundane to check. Touch everything and look everywhere making sure all items work as they should.

Don't forget the tires!

Does the air conditioner work?

7

Pay attention specifically to the amount of tread left on the tires. Use a tire depth gauge to evaluate the depth, and if you don't have a tire depth gauge you can use a penny. Put Abe Lincoln's head into the tread and hope you don't see it, which would mean the tires have great tread depth. If you see the top of his hair line you probably need to buy tires. Run your hand over the tread to make sure there are no high or low spots on the tires. High or low spots on a tire are an indication of uneven wear, possibly caused by alignment problems.

Once the engine sounds and runs good make sure to check out the A/C system. Turn it on to the coldest setting to make sure that it's blowing very cold air. If it's not blowing cold then it might need new Freon added. A/C systems are notoriously expensive to fix, making sure it works properly could save a lot of money down the road.

3

Pop the hood.

Take the vehicle for a test drive and pay attention!

8

Look under the hood, checking to see if any fluids are leaking, or if there are wet spots. Also check the hoses. If there are any cracks on hoses they could already be leaking, or will start leaking soon. Before you drive the car start the car and let it run for 5 minutes and then shut the car off. Wait another 5 minutes and then look underneath the vehicle and see if there are any fluids on the ground. This is a good way to check to see if the vehicle is leaking any fluids. Check the oil for the proper level and color and the coolant and radiator for leaks or corrosion. After a test drive wait 5 minutes and look under the car for wet spots on the ground, this is a great way to see leaks.

You're not only test driving to see if you like it, you're test driving it to make sure everything is working OK. Go over bumps and listen for rattles. Note the mileage when you left, and make sure the odometer is keeping track of miles correctly. Test the steering and alignment. Practice parking for maneuverability and sight lines. After the test drive, inspect the engine for leaks, odors or smoke. Drive on the highway to gauge acceleration and handling. When driving try and hit some bumps to make sure you don't hear any unusual sounds.

4

Turn the key, but don't start it.

Press the brakes.

9

This tests whether or not all the dash lights are working. Every light on the instrument panel should light up and then turn off. If a light does not turn off there may be an issue that needs addressed. Specifically check the 'Check Engine Light' and the 'Air Bags Light' and finally the 'ABS Light'.

On the test drive pay attention when applying the brakes. Do the brakes pulsate? If so that's a problem. If the pedal goes to the floor then you have a problem. Make sure there are no grinding noises coming from the brakes as this can be caused by wear on the pads. If this happens it may be time to replace the brake pads. When driving, brake hard to stop the vehicle quickly while listening for noises.

Start the engine.

Evaluate the vehicle's overall appearance.

10

When you start the engine make sure the radio and all loud noises are off and listen for any weird noises. Pay attention to squeaks, ticks or knocking noises while the vehicle is running. While in park, step on the gas pedal and listen for unusual noises. A knocking noise from the engine is a clear indicator that something is seriously wrong.

Open the doors, hood and trunk and see if they shut snugly. Doors that are out of whack might have gotten that way from an accident that wasn't fixed well (or at all). Look at the hinges and door latches for signs of rust and damage. Check the undercarriage, engine and body for major rust, unattached or hanging items or damage items. Check under the dash looking for water lines or rusted bolts as a possible indicator of water damage.

The final 2 items that every used car buyer should do as part of their buying process is have the vehicle inspected by a professional technician and purchase a vehicle history report. At Fred Martin Superstore we provide a Carfax Vehicle History Report on every vehicle we have for sale at no charge. Always keep in mind a history report that doesn't show an accident doesn't always mean the vehicle hasn't been in one. Vehicle history reports are not perfect, but are a good indicator of a vehicle's past.
